

Bryant Denny Stadium

At the end of 2004, The University of Alabama Board of Trustees approved a $47 million expansion to the north endzone of Bryant Denny Stadium. Two years later another $93 million expansion to the south end was approved. In total the two expansions upgraded the Alabama football teams home stadium to one of the best facilities in the United States.

The north endzone expansion gives ticketholders access to a 15,500 square foot indoor lounge area as well as outdoor chair-back seats. The expansion also included a make-over of the facade of the stadium and introduced the Walk of Champions which is an outdoor path that leads the team into the stadium for each home game.

The south endzone mirrored the construction of the north side, but included a 12,600 square foot lounge area and 1,698 chair-back seats.

In total both additions added a total of close to 27,000 new seats to the stadium.
